Uncorrected vision is a serious problem affecting as many as 20,000 children in Iowa. A disproportionate number of these children are minorities and come from low-income families. Barriers like access and cost prevent families from getting children the vision care they need. Launched locally with Community Foundation support, Vision To Learn is a nonprofit that breaks down those barriers by bringing a mobile clinic to schools and providing eye exams and glasses at no cost to schools or families.
How It Works

After an initial screening of K-12 students, the Vision To Learn mobile clinic visits the school and a licensed optometrist provides eye exams to students who need further attention. That same day, students who are prescribed glasses choose from a wide selection of fashionable frames.

Approximately two weeks later, Vision To Learn’s optician returns to distribute glasses. Each student is fitted with their new frames and lenses and instructed on care and cleaning. Some students receive two pairs, one for home and one that stays at school to ensure they’re always available when it’s time to learn.

Why It Matters

As much as 80% of a child’s learning in the first 12 years is obtained visually. Children with poor vision struggle to see the words in a book or the lessons on a classroom board, which impedes their ability to keep up in class.

Our Unique Role

In 2016, the Community Foundation partnered with Vision To Learn to pilot a mobile clinic at three Title I schools in Jackson County. Since then mobile clinic has visited Andrew, Bellevue, Easton Valley and Maquoketa school districts. Vision To Learn has conducted 461 eye exams, providing 281 children with glasses.

Today, the Community Foundation partners with local donors, including the Koehler family, to support a continued relationship with Vision To Learn and provide Jackson County students the vision care they need to succeed in school and in life.

Our Accomplishments

Research shows that Vision To Learn has helped achieve many positive changes in the children it has served, including:

- More engaged, focused classroom behavior
- Improved self-esteem and confidence
- Higher math and reading GPAs
- Enhanced quality of life
- Students feeling empowered
